Henry C. Breckinridge, Assistant Secretary of War, Speaks at Manassas Peace Jubilee.

PREPAREDNESS OF NATION KEYNOTE OF HIS ADDRESS

Talks Also Given by Veterans of Both Sides When Memorial Tablet Is Unveiled.

In speaking yesterday at the unveiling of the tablet commemorating the nation-Henry C Breckinridge, assistant secre-tary of war, sounded the note of preparedness and asked the thousands of veterans and men and women of a younger genera tion what they intended to do for their ountry. The tablet unveiling was attended by veterans of both s des of the great civil conflict, the tablet itself commemorating the first gathering in the world's history of the veterans of two armies which once fought against each other. Assistant Secretary Breckinridge spoke in lieu of President Wilson, who regretfully declined the opportunity to ap-pear at Manasses at this time because of the fact that his thoughts are mortgaged and held by the problems presented by the European situation.

In leading up to his appeal to be prepared in a military sense, Mr. Breckin-

Merged With Stars and Stripes.

In conclusion he said: The north and the south were fused in the days of '61 to '65. The fire was a consuming fire and the heat thereof was merciless. But the Stars and Bars were not destroyed; they were merged into the folds of the Stars and Stripes. And the fusion of the two make the stars of Old Glory shine bright on a deeper field of blue. The purity of the white stripes is purer—purged of all sectional jealousy and strife. The red is of even a deeper hue, suffused as it were with the pure and enduring shade of unity and common patriotism. In the present army of the United States the sons of the boys in blue march shoulder to shoulder with the sons of the boys in gray, and God grant that they may be worthy of their fathers."

market, Va., a nonagenarian survivor of the 8th Virginia Regiment, with Lieut. Round, unveiled the tablet, which was draped in Old Glory until the cord was pulled by the two veterans of the blue and gray.

Mr. Breckinridge was introduced by Representative Carlin of Virginia. Judge J. B. T. Thornton of the sixteenth judicial circuit, who was designated by Gov. Stuart, made the address of welcome on behalf of the state of Virginia.

of welcome on behalf of the state of Virginia.

Westwood Hutchison, commander of Ewell Camp, Confederate Veterans, welcomed the visitors in the name of Ewell Camp. Brief addresses were made by a number of Union and Confederate veterans, who were called to the front by Lieut. Round. Both invocation and benediction were pronounced by Rev. George L. Thompson of Sarasota, Fla., a southern resident, but a Grand Army man. A short invocation in verse, which was a part of the original jubilee program, was repeated by its author, Col. Edmund Berkeley. Description of the Tablet.

The tablet is of white bronze, mounted on a base of white granite. The commemorative group includes also two bronze cannon and several mounds of file supplements to the original tariffs. cannon balls, which were the recent gift of the War Department, and two anchors with chains, which were loaned by the Secretary of the Navy. The entire group is placed on a concrete base terraced down to the level of the courthouse lawn, at the intersection of Grant and Lee avenues.
